

Desiring Sex, Longing for Love: A Tripartite Conundrum

William Jankowiak
Department of Anthropology
University of Nevada, Las Vegas

The tension between love and sex is presented not as the simple contrast of two values, but as a tripartite conflict between the sexual imperative, romantic passion, and comfort love.

Recent and ongoing research projects will be presented, including family life in polygamous communities, rituals design to sustain comfort love among swingers, motivation for desiring a mistress instead of a prostitute, and a study of individuals who are deeply in love with two people at the same time.

4:00 PM
Lecture Hall 2
Friday, November 6

Evolutionary Studies Seminar Series
<http://evolution.binghamton.edu/jankowiak/>