This lecture will be about the history of the cross-fertilization of ideas in economics and biology, the abandonment of biology and psychology by economists that came with the “marginalist revolution”, and the return of evolutionary thinking in contemporary economics.

Monday, January 25, 2010
Science I, Room 149

Students report at 5:00 PM
Lecture begins at 5:30 PM

Spring 2010 EvoS Seminar Series evolution.binghamton.edu/gowdy