

Evolution, Behavior, and the Encultured Brain

Daniel Lende
Department of Anthropology
University of Notre Dame

In this talk I will first discuss how a return to basic evolutionary concepts, such as adaptation and phylogeny, yields empirical purchase on behavioral problems.

I will then outline how neuroanthropology, which brings together emerging understandings of neuroplasticity with biocultural approaches in anthropology, can work synergistically with evolutionary analyses.

Monday, February 8, 2010
Science I, Room 149, 5:00 PM

Spring 2010 EvoS Seminar Series evolution.binghamton.edu/lende